Robin enjoys creating and everything pertaining to Robin And The Giant, especially seeing the smiles on the faces of the children and hearing the laughter in their voices.

Larry Whitler was born in New York City and grew up in a suburb on Long Island. His interest in music manifested itself at an early age in the form of accordion lessons at a music school within walking distance of his childhood home in North Merrick. During his early teen years Larry developed a fondness for "pop" or "top-forty" music and taught himself to play guitar using the knowledge gained during his accordion lesson days.

At the age of seventeen Larry moved with his family to rural Dunnellon, Florida. Musical styles in this new home were drastically different from those in metropolitan New York and the exposure to folk and country music in Florida blended with the influences from the city of rock and pop music.

Larry played bars, nightclubs, and colleges up until the time he became a father. Becoming a Dad inspired him to write songs for children.
